FIND BOOKS & E-BOOKS

Why?

For background, overview, or theoretical information
To understand how topics relate
To get research topic ideas
To identify other sources of information (review bibliographies)
HOW TO FIND BOOKS & E-BOOKS @ LHL

Catalog - searches both print and e-books

E-Books - searches just e-books

Quick keyword search

More search options (author, title, keyword)
HOW TO SEE IF LHL HAS ONLINE ACCESS TO A JOURNAL

E-Journals look-up
For example:

The easiest way to look up full text if you have a citation:

Step 1: Search PubMed by article title

If no luck there, then…

Step 2: Search Google Scholar by article title (put in quotation marks).

(Make sure you’ve gone to Settings > Library Links and set Lister Hill links to show. See slide 18.)

If no luck there, then…

Step 3: Ask A Librarian (www.uab.edu/lister/ask) or request via interlibrary loan

HOW TO FIND JOURNAL ARTICLES

1. Identify appropriate database(s)
2. Search effectively
3. Select relevant & appropriate articles
4. Access complete articles
IDENTIFY AN APPROPRIATE DATABASE

Databases page
www.uab.edu/lister/databases

Select Health Services Administration from Category drop-down menu
IDENTIFY AN APPROPRIATE DATABASE

Each database has description and links to help information, when available

IDENTIFY AN APPROPRIATE DATABASE

Key databases for health informatics topics:

- ABI/INFORM Complete – business, trade journals, news
- Academic Search Complete – multidisciplinary, scholarly
- Business Source Complete – business, company, industry, peer-reviewed
- Gartner Core Research – technology trends
- Google Scholar – multidisciplinary, full-text search
- PubMed – biomedical, life sciences
- Scopus – international, multidisciplinary

See our Health Services Administration guide for links to help resources on these databases

SEARCH EFFECTIVELY

Identify key concepts of your search topic

- Using Key Concepts tutorial (3:43)

Use connecting terms (AND, OR, NOT) to communicate relationships between terms

- Using Boolean Operators tutorial (3:55)

Look for helpful database search limits that focus results on your information need (e.g., date range, English only, peer-reviewed, review articles, etc.)

Every database searches differently. Look for Help or Search Tips links within each database or refer to LHL Guide on specific database.
SELECT RELEVANT & APPROPRIATE ARTICLES

Look at subject terms listed under abstract to quickly determine relevance & other possible search terms

Look at “related” articles suggested by the database (often to the right of abstract)
REMEMBER...

Searching the literature is an art!
There is no one “right” way to search on a topic

Building muscles takes repetition and time
So does becoming an efficient/effective searcher

Abstract

Background: Translating and scaling healthcare quality improvement (QI) and patient safety interventions and patient safety research have begun to focus on context, with ethnography seen as a promising method. While ethnography is widely used to explore the context of a variety of QI and safety interventions, the

WHY USE ENDNOTE®?

To save time!

- Collect references from multiple databases in a single “library” of your own
- Create multiple groups of references by topic/project
- Insert & format references in Microsoft Word

Can sync your EndNote library to EndNote online to:

- Access references from any computer with Internet connection
- Share groups of references with classmates & colleagues
ADD CITATIONS TO YOUR WORD DOCUMENT

Review of the Literature

A review of the nutrition education literature as it relates to the widely-recognized need to incorporate research into dietetics curriculum. Several studies have found that students often lack research skills which has proven to be an obstacle preventing them from applying research evidence into practice. Several authors have reported the results of the Smith study, which describes a series of courses designed to improve research skills among future nutrition professionals.
